PREFACE.

When the present Secretary of State, S. D. Dickinson, assumed office in 1902, he found an accumulation of records and files of over two centuries which were in considerable demand, without either adequate arrangement or protection.

More filing space, a more scientific arrangement of the files, better safeguards against fire and moisture, and a more comprehensive system of indexing, were imperative. The task was accordingly assigned to J. B. R. Smith, the Assistant Secretary of State, who at once undertook the work and devoted to it much thought and study. Filing space, adequate fire protection, and freedom from destroying dampness, were found by a scientific treatment and modern arrangement of the two vaults under the main offices and the rearrangement of the two small vaults on the office floor. The corporation files and records, the court files and records, and the executive and miscellaneous papers were rearranged and re-indexed; and in 1905, the treatment of the probate records and wills was undertaken. This work consisted of an entire rearrangement of the wills on file as well as of the records of those wills which by law were kept in the office, beginning with 1663 and continuing to the present time.

The plan adopted was to arrange all wills prior to the beginning of the twentieth century in one group and prepare and publish a complete index. The wills filed subsequent to the beginning of the present century continued to be filed according to law by counties, but were so arranged that one card index would serve the purpose for all the counties. The wills and the records of wills prior to 1901 divide themselves chronologically into four classes. First, those filed prior to 1705, which were originally known as the unindexed wills. Second, wills between 1705 and 1804, of which it was the purpose of the law to preserve both the original will and probate papers, and the records thereof, in the Department of State. Third, wills filed between 1804 and 1830, inclusive, being those which came to the office after the records thereof ceased to be retained here, and before the law required that these should be filed separately by counties. Fourth, those between 1831 and 1900, inclusive, where the law required the files of the respective counties to be kept separately. These wills and records have all been systematically treated and re-indexed as of one series, and will be published in four volumes comprising more than one hundred and eighty-five thousand entries, reference being made in the index not only to the name of the testator and intestate, but to all papers and records connected therewith.

In addition to this, many of the records, as well as the original wills, prior to 1800, were found to be so badly worn as to be of almost no value. These papers were entrusted to the Emery Record Preserving Company of Taunton, Massachusetts, which has preserved and bound them in book form, making one hundred and twelve volumes of early records.
